Casey Fields Criterium, 4/1/2014: Race reports:-

Unfortunately, no race reports have been presented this week. It may be because of the holidays, or just from lack of interest by the members. But in fact, the contributions have gradually declined over the recent past. There were times when several reports were sent in for the same grade. Now occasionally 1 or 2 from 6 grades is what can be expected. If you, the members have any suggestions as to why this is the case, or you would like to offer some changes to the newsletter and its content, please contact the editor. Irrespective of the content, it takes time to put the newsletter together 52 weeks a year and David does this with little recognition and no complaint. If the newsletter is not what you like or expect, we can change the content, the format or even drop the newsletter all together. It begs the question, how many of you actually do read the Newsletter? Neil Cartledge Sub editor.

D Grade: Neil Cartledge

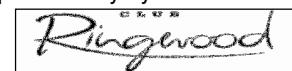

With the neutral lap completed in the usual unhurried fashion, the racing commenced with Dean Niclasen leading off the front but attracting little attention. The wind soon brought Dean to his senses or if you prefer, back to the bunch.

Michael Muscat, always near the front, decided to test the bunch's resolve and pulled away by about 50 metres. When the gap was large enough, the front riders lifted the pace but just maintained the gap in so doing, leaving Michael to dangle off the front for several laps, in those energy sapping windy conditions. Even when Michael slowed to enable the bunch to come up to his wheel, nobody hinted that they would like to relieve him. So for a couple more laps Michael led the bunch into and with the wind.

At about half distance the contenders for envelopes pushed to the front to stamp their future claims. Dean did more work while Colin Mortley, Alan Cunneen Phi Taylor and several others followed suit. Michael was back lifting the pace and threatening to make a breakaway. This was the making for some nervous riders in the bunch chasing him if the gap looked like blowing out and sitting on when it didn't.

Towards the end of the 60 minutes, the conditions and the pace set by the front runners led to several calling it a day. It also led to the average speed dropping and the nemesis, C grade starting to close on the group. There is a lot of pride in keeping C grade at bay within the D grade fraternity.

With the bell imminent, several riders started attacks in anticipation, only to be denied and quietly slipping back into the peloton. Finally the toll of the bell accompanied with the big 'D' indicated there was only 2.2k of hostilities left.

In the clubhouse straight Peter Mackie decided to 'manipulate' the aggregate points for the year by attacking, with Geoff Cranstone stuck on his wheel. The reaction was normal, jump on the train. Until the back straight the fainting and threats were muted. On the second last turn, Phil took the front and wound up the pace with the aid of the wind at his back. Neil was on his wheel and the powerful Dean perfectly placed in third position.

The status quo continued until the final turn towards the line. Phil held his left hand line and accelerated. Neil followed suit for some distance and then pulled to Phil's right to inherit the front spot. In the meantime, Dean was pouring on the power further to the right and came out of the wind shadow to lead to the line despite a late kick from Neil. The big threat in the form of Michael Muscat negated by cramps in the last lap. Next time... who knows?

A good clean and enjoyable race at moderate average speed with no incidences of safety issues. Thanks guys.
